AMERICANIZATION – Did You Know???

President's Day

George Washington was born on February 11, 1731. According to the Julian Calendar, in 1752 Britain and her colonies adopted the Gregorian calendar, jumping ahead 11 days, making January the first month of the year instead of March. According to the new calendar, Washington's birthday changed to February 22, 1732.

The celebration of Washington's birthday has a history as old as our country. It was celebrated publicly for the first time in the late 18th century, while Washington was still President.

The celebration became official in 1885, when President Chester Arthur signed a bill making his birthday a federal holiday. In 1968, Congress passed the Monday Holiday Act which moved the observance from February 22nd to the third Monday of the month.
